Mont Saint-Sauveur closes its 2009-2010 season—the longest ski season in Quebec!

Saint-Sauveur, May 10, 2010 – Mont Saint-Sauveur officially announces the end of its 2009-2010 season. For the first time in its history, the ski hill opened on October 18th, thanks to early cold temperatures and a high-performance snowmaking system—the perfect conditions for a great start to the season!

After 147 days of skiing, Mont Saint-Sauveur has once again held its promise of the longest ski season in Quebec. Despite spring skiing temperatures well above normal, the past six months are ending on a positive note.

During its last weekend of operation, Mont Saint-Sauveur welcomed the Laurentian Ski Division to the only summer camp in Quebec. A first in our province, the event allowed 30 youths to participate in a last tune-up workout before taking out their bathing suits for the summer.

Making way for the summer

With its water park opening in just a few weeks, Mont Saint-Sauveur wants to remind you that a total of $3 million has been invested to provide new activities while respecting the mountain's natural environment. Don't miss your chance to come brave the curves on the Viking Alpine Coaster and venture down the two new water slides at hair-raising speeds. Until the next fabulous ski season begins, come have a blast at the biggest water park in a mountain setting!

When the Mont Saint-Sauveur Water Park opens on June 5th, the decor will be more beautiful and enchanting than ever, thanks to all the work its team has done on the site.
